

'For days, my daughter slept on an empty stomach. She has spent months with just two pairs of clothes. Never did she complain once. Because she understands that our savings have been spent on the treatment of her ailing mother. I have to take care of both my wife and daughter.

It is not easy managing my work in the factory and attending to my daughter's needs. She's a brave girl. Even though she does not get food on time when I am out working in the factory, she smiles. Now that she goes to a school, she has promised that she will teach me how to write my name soon.'
